When an object is shot with the cannon, we need to find its distance from the cannon's location and store it in a float variable. How can I do this? A: If I understand correctly you need to: Get the Vector from the Cannon. Get the Vector from the Object you are shooting. Calculate the dot product of the two and get the distance. Since this seems like a possible duplicate question, I'll say why I'm double posting instead of making a comment - I can't find a way to make one into a comment (though I did try). If so, you can get the Vector from a Cannon like so: Vector3 FromCannon = Cannon.transform.InverseTransformPoint(FromCannonLocation); If you need to find the vector from an Object then you can use code from the answer of this post: Unity3d - Get Position of GameObject in Direction using Camera or NetworkRenderer Now, to get the distance, 595f342e71
