Prove that if p and p' are prime numbers, then $p^2+p'^2$ is divisible by at least one of p and p' . I want to prove that if p and p' are prime numbers, then $p^2+p'^2$ is divisible by at least one of p and p' . I can only come up with a proof by contradiction. But I would prefer a nice, short proof. A: Hint: What is the remainder of p^2 when divided by p' ? A: Another way of proceeding is to use the theory of quadratic residues. We say that a is a quadratic residue of d if a is an integer that satisfies $a^2 \equiv d \pmod{d}$. For example, let's see if 101 is a quadratic residue of 19 . $101^2 \equiv 1 \pmod{19}$ Looking at the table of quadratic residues, we see that 101 is not a quadratic residue of 19 . So to be precise, one way to prove this is to show that 19 is not a quadratic residue of 101 . A: Let p, p' are positive prime numbers. Let $M = \min\{p, p'\}$. Now we have to prove that $p^2+p'^2$ is divisible by at least one of p, p' . So we can assume w.l.o.g. $p \leq p'$. Case 1: $p > M$. Then $p^2 = pm + p'^2$ for some $m \in \mathbb{Z}_+$ (where $m=0$ if $p=M$). So $p^2+p'^2 = (pm+p^2) + (p'^2-p^2) = pm+p^2+p'^2-p^2 = pm+p$ b7e8fd5c8
