Antenatal diagnosis of a severe handicap]. In two cases of fetal alcohol syndrome a standard prenatal diagnosis was made. The diagnosis was based on the finding of typical facial features (short broad nose, depressed nasal bridge and widely spaced eyes), microcephaly, and skeletal malformations. In the first case these features were already present at 25 weeks of gestation but the diagnosis was only made at 33 weeks. In the second case both parents were unaware of their drinking habits and the diagnosis was made at 28 weeks of gestation. This pregnancy was terminated. It is concluded that all women should be informed that drinking alcohol during pregnancy is hazardous to both mother and fetus and that an early and early enough prenatal diagnosis may help to alleviate the handicaps associated with fetal alcohol syndrome.Borden Transport Borden Transport is a Canadian trucking company that owns and operates a network of trucking companies as a wholly owned subsidiary of Nortel.
