LEIGH DALE, England — Inside a dim office a stone's throw from the famous Barge Inn, along England's river Lea, is a cleverly designed bunker underneath a nondescript warehouse. Run by British soldiers and laden with an arsenal of weaponry, it is here that author David Atherton relaxes in the middle of a complex cyberwar. We've come to talk to Atherton about his latest, "Wonder War," which offers a look at the UK's recent cyber conflict with Russia. Atherton came away from his tour of a war-torn Russia in February of this year (on assignment from his publisher) with the sense that Britain's war on Russia's social media was rather underwhelming. Having worked on the subject for over a decade, he can attest to the fact that the damage caused by the cyberwar is incalculable and will only continue to build. "The journalist in me is interested in seeing the vulnerability," Atherton says
