DTOT - Delphi Technology and Tools. Delphi is the leader in serial and hardware-based diagnostic software for automotive..... 1.2.A comparison of the efficacy and safety of intravenous pamidronate and zoledronic acid in the treatment of osteoporosis in women with advanced breast cancer. Patients with bone metastases from breast cancer are at risk of developing osteoporosis and fractures. Bisphosphonates are the mainstay treatment for osteoporosis but they are less effective in patients with poor renal function. Pamidronate has previously been shown to be more effective than intravenous zoledronic acid in the management of postmenopausal osteoporosis and in prevention of vertebral and non-vertebral fractures. We compared pamidronate and zoledronic acid for the treatment of osteoporosis in women with advanced breast cancer. In this open-label, randomised, active-controlled trial (the Pamidronate for Women with Breast Cancer - Osteoporosis Assessment [PAWHBA] study), women with bone-only or bone and visceral metastases from breast cancer were randomly assigned to either pamidronate 60 mg or zoledronic acid 4 mg. Patients were administered the study drugs on days 1, 3, 5, and 8 of each 21-day cycle, with treatment being continued until there was an assessment of disease progression, with a cycle being 14 days. The primary efficacy variable was the percentage of patients achieving at least one or more non-vertebral fracture during the 24-month follow-up. Secondary variables included the percentage of patients achieving non-vertebral fracture-free survival at 12, 18, and 24 months and safety. The trial was stopped for safety concerns. Recruitment was halted on 31 July 2007 because of a 43% increase in the proportion of patients in the zoledronic acid group experiencing at least one or more non-vertebral fracture compared with the pamidronate group (p=0.001) after 25 months of treatment. In the bone-only group, 23 (16%) of 145 pamidronate and 19 (10%) of 188 zoledronic acid patients had non-vertebral fractures (p=0.05). Similar rates were seen in the patients with bone and visceral metastases, with 30 (19%) of 155 pamidronate and 16 (10%) of 155 zoledronic acid patients having non
