our case law clearly holds that the presence of baking soda alone cannot establish that a defendant possessed cocaine base. see, e.g., united states v. brown, 541 f.3d 809, 829-30 (9th cir.2008). baking soda, along with other ingredients, is commonly used to cut powder cocaine and form crack cocaine. see united states v. gunter, 551 f.3d 472, 481 n. 14 (6th cir.2009) (noting that cocaine base may be cut with baking soda in addition to other ingredients); united states v. frazier, 423 f.3d 526, 532 (6th cir.2005) ("it is common practice among users of powder cocaine to cook the powder into crack."); united states v. harris, 368 f.3d 363, 367 (4th cir.2004) ("it was common knowledge in [the neighborhood] that crack cocaine had to be cooked in order to be smoked. brown, 334 f.3d 1161, 1162 (d.c.cir.2003) ("[m]any of the thousands of crack users learn how to cook the powder from others in the community."). in this case, however, the evidence, which includes the presence of baking soda with cocaine base, indicates that the substance found on edwards was crack cocaine. long after its introduction, crack cocaine has continued to be the most popular form of cocaine. "crack is typically mixed, then smoked using a special crack pipe that heats the mixture, causing it to smoke more rapidly (in contrast to powder cocaine, which is simply smoked). crack cocaine is considerably more potent than similar quantities of pure powder cocaine." c.f.s., 551 f.3d at 254-55. the difference in potency is the effect of the heating of the cocaine, which converts it into a form that is far more harmful. "the acids that break down cocaine in the body result in an inflammatory response, brain damage, and damage to the respiratory system." in the long-term, smoking crack cocaine, especially in the quantities that edwards and his customers used, creates "hardening of the arteries (atherosclerosis) and malnutrition." a. 155-56. crack use has also been linked to "schizophrenia, paranoia, anxiety, panic, mood swings, and cognitive impairment. 156. 5ec8ef588b
